BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Joseph Edward Bolton was born on 3 December 1961 in Cadiz, Kentucky, the son of Ed and Nancy (Foster) Bolton. His parents were schoolteachers. Bolton attended public schools in Cadiz. He started his college studies at the University of Mississippi but transferred to Western Kentucky University (WKU) the following year. He graduated summa cum laude with a Bachelor's of Arts degree from WKU, where he received the Jeoffrey McCelvey Memorial Award and the Gordon Wilson Award. He then matriculated at the University of Florida (UF), where he received a Master's in English in 1988. He also finished all the requirements for a MFA from the University of Arizona. He did other graduate work at the University of Houston and at UF. For a brief period he taught creative writing at UF. Bolton committed suicide on 30 March 1990. He had a brief marriage while in Kentucky and was married for a short period in the late-1980s to Laurie Berry.

Bolton's highly biographical poetry received praise and was published in a number of literary journals. His Breckinridge County Suite was published by The Cummington Press in 1989. Days of Summer Gone, a collection of poems that had been used for his 1988 thesis at UF, was published by The Galileo Press in 1990. Donald Justice collected a large number of his poems in a posthumous book The Last Nostalgia published by the University of Arkansas Press in 1999. Justice had taught Bolton at the University of Florida.
